Page 42 ENGLISH General Specifications Power supply Power consumption. Audio performance LINE OUT 1 No. Review Below Digital Radio is becoming increasingly important in hifi see the likes of products like the Arcam DT91. But now thanks to Denon Digital Radio and the mini system have suddenly become an item, with products like the DF102DAB system. Those wanting to port an MP3 player can stick it into the front audio jack, or use an optional ASD1R iPod dock, which offers remote control over the Apple player. For those after a touch of retro, a DRRF102 cassette deck is available as an optional extra too. The specification is impressive for what is essentially a mini system. The CD player can cope with MP3 or WMA files recorded on a CDR, and sports a 192kHz, 24bit audiophilegrade digital to analogue converter. Both modules have clear and easy to understand displays, with a twoline dot matrix scrolling text for DAB info iPod too if you use the ASD1R. Both units draw an environmentallychummy 0.1W in standby.Serious hifiDenon calls this system serious hifi.The sound is richly dynamic, clean and musical. Best of all, like a good hifi should, it sounds just as good wiggling out to headsdwn rock as it does being cerebral to some Bach twopart piano inventions. Of all the sources on offer, the CD is the real star; it puts many good separates CD players to shame with its honest portrayal of music in the CD tray.But the radio section is not far behind, and in many respects the sound of DAB through this system represents the best balance between pleasant sounding but frequencylimited portable radios and the digitallaidbare sound of fullon separates hifi. Its also a very cool piece of HIFi Each unit is 25cm wide and if needed can be discreetly hidden.

looks really good on show due to its minimalist styling It has been fully tested and put through its paces by us, its in fantastic and very clean condition. This unit produces an amazing sound and is all fully working, add an iPod into the Auxiliary or via an optional Bluetooth and you will have a fantastic system that was very expensive when new. You can even hook it up to your TV Sky DVD Freeview and would make a great replacement for a sound bar.Plenty of rear connection possibilities, you can connect a Bluetooth adaptor to the auxiliary and start streaming Digital Internet Radio with endless Stations with a suitable device User Guide Link Below Happy to post through the Ebay Global Posting Programme I prefer collection but will post, if we to post we will very carefully bubble wrap the units and lay it on a bed of bubble wrap in a very strong box that we will purchase specially for the posting. We use Aircap branded extra large bubble wrap and where we can recycled packing, we pride ourselves on our packing so that you receive your item in one piece. Please appreciate the time and extra expense involved and please mention our packing in your feed back. Thank you for viewing. International buyers and UK Channel Islands please contact me first. Library shot of rear to show connections, user guide missing but included a link in the description. Please contact me for UK Islands and International, please be aware I will post out of the UK but it will be entirely at your risk if damaged in transit or goes missing I will not be held responsible !! You will have to deal direct with the UK shipping company for any claims. Please also be aware we sell Vintage pre owned HiFi that we fully test for functionality and if not working we will clearly state, you should also expect the items to be in good condition reflect their age by having some scratches or blemishes that is par for the course.

We do not sell new HiFi but we sell great used and Vintage HiFi personally selected by us for you to enjoy. I also embrace the concept of great customer service and have great customers that have been overwhelmed by our products and service, thank you RetroJunkie You are the light of the
